$1.6 million borrowing bylaw passed electronically Mayor said debate already made and move necessary to meet agreement timeline

BY JOHNNIE BACHUSKY
Review Staff

Didsbury town council has taken the unusual step of voting electronically to ensure a timeline agreement on a $1.6 million loan was met to acquire ownership of the Truss Plant industrial shop that will now be the new home for the fire department and public works and parks staff.

Mayor Brian Wittal said second and third readings on a bylaw to authorize council to borrow the money was passed unanimously. He agreed the move was rare but not unprecedented. He said the town was facing an urgent timeline issue on a tentative agreement, which stated that ownership of the property at 2602 - 19 St. would legally change hands on Sept. 1.

"It was to make sure we had met the timeline. We had previous discussions on it and we thought it was appropriate to have an electronic vote," said Wittal, adding there was no public response to the purchase. "If (vote) was more of a formality because we already had the debate."

In July, council sold its current public works building for $600,000 to the former owner of the Truss Plant, which included the Parks and Recreation shop as well as bus storage. In turn, the town acquired the Truss Plant.

The town has already moved its public works and parks staff into its new 16,360 sq.-ft. quarters at the north end of town. Last week, an architect met with town officials to discuss when it would be possible to move the fire department into the building.

The town's acquisition follows its move earlier this year to purchase 45 acres of land for more than $1 million from the now defunct Canadian Minerals Inc.

The land, now known as Shantz Crossing Business Park and located on the northeast corner of Hwy. 582 and 23 Street (Rge. Rd. 2.0), is slated for commercial and industrial development.

With that purchase the town also had to take a loan of more than $750,000 for water and sewer services.

As well, the town received notice this summer the province has finally approved a $6.2 million grant to Didsbury for the expansion and revitalization of the sewer lagoon. The grant still leaves a $6.8 million shortfall for the project, which will have a total cost of more than $13 million. It is expected the money will be found through annual provincial municipal funding, said Wittal.

He said the town has already spent about $350,000 in engineering costs for the project.

With these major expenditures either made, approved, or committed Wittal conceded taking on such a large debt was a concern, and anticipates town residents will see an increase in residential taxes at least for next year. However, he added any increase would be held to the cost of living.

School zones come into effect

BY JOSH SKAPIN
For The Review

Police are advising drivers to be mindful of classes returning to session this week.

Chinook's Edge School Division students are back in their desks Sept. 1, which will mean an influx of additional foot and vehicle traffic in and around schools.

Didsbury RCMP will be ramping up patrols in school zones located in Carstairs, Cremona and Didsbury.

"We want to remind both pedestrians and the motoring public to be extra vigilant when in and around school areas," said Didsbury RCMP Sgt. Jeff Jacobson, adding that the roadways near schools will see a hike in foot traffic before school starts, at lunch hour and at the end of the school day.

"We will certainly be out patrolling the school zones reminding people of the various safety concerns."

This includes speeds through school zone areas, which in Carstairs include Scarlett Ranch Blvd. and Rge. Rd. 1.

The fine for speeding through a school zone fluctuates depending on the speed. It also means being extra cautious with crosswalks.

"Make sure that you're slowing for crosswalks," Jacobson said.

"For those using crosswalks, making sure that vehicles are stopping before entering a crosswalk."

Jacobson also advises motorists to be aware of the increase in children on bicycles heading to school.

"Certainly we want to remind youth to wear their helmets and follow the proper etiquette there and for motorists to be cognizant of the fact that there may be more cyclists out than they're used to," he said.

After months of not thinking about school zones, there's an adjustment, but drivers tend to catch on quickly, Jacobson said.

School zone safety is one of Didsbury RCMP's priorities in this year's performance plan.

As a result, Jacobson expects members to be present in a school zone within the detachment's jurisdiction on a daily basis.

Jacobsen.

The statue disappeared from St. Anthony's between July 22 and 25, and just as inexplicably, was returned.

Thefts that defy explanation such as this are often fuelled by alcohol, noted Sgt. Jacobsen.

Although church officials could not be reached for comment, St. Anthony's spokesperson John Kohut said they are thankful the statue has returned, but preferred not to elaborate any further on the matter.

A statue of an angel that used to grace the front property of St. Anthony's Catholic Church has been returned between Aug. 2 and 5, after having been missing for nearly a month, said Didsbury RCMP Sgt. Jeff Jacobsen.

"It's possible that someone under the influence of alcohol took it, and thought better of it the next day, and eventually, their conscience got the better of them," said Sgt.

Vandenhoven wins BMX gold at nationals

BY JARED SIEMENS
Review Staff

Winning may not be everything, but sometimes being the best for your age class in the country certainly doesn't hurt a man's confidence, either.

Enter Didsbury's own Tanner Vandenhoven, who recently returned with a gold medal in the 15-year-old male class from the Canadian Cycling Association's (CCA) BMX National Championship race in Quebec City between August 5 and 7.

The Review caught up with Vandenhoven last week, while he was on his way to compete in the Grands in St. Albert, a provincial championship that will qualify him for year-end rankings.

The August 7 nationals race saw Vandenhoven competing against the best BMX racers in the country, and he said he's extremely proud to win the award in light of the tough competition he faced.

"I'm glad I came out on top," he said.

Vandenhoven has been sitting comfortably at the top of Alberta's provincial rosters for the last five years, but has finished third in the last four sets of nationals, so this year's gold-medal win represents a breakthrough for him.

"It felt amazing crossing the finish line in first, because I've gotten third quite a few times," he admits.

Deprived of a track to practise on, Vandenhoven usually hasn't trained in the wintertime. However, he hit the gym hard last winter, working on increasing his pedal speed on spin bikes and lifting weights - a practice he credits his win with.

So when Vandenhoven arrived at qualifiers in Quebec City, he was physically prepared to take the prize he'd worked all winter for.

It all began with a set of three motos (qualifiers) in which racers vie for places in the final run. But his physical training couldn't have prepared him for what was about to happen next.

"Me and Braden Wood (an Ontario competitor) were basically going into the corner at the same time, and he cut over and took my front tire out."

This caused Vandenhoven to wipe out completely.

"Two of the people behind me ran me over. It was kind of a big dog pile."

Adrenalin forced him back on his feet, said Vandenhoven.

"I just got straight back up, I didn't even really think about it," he said. "Afterwards it was hurting pretty bad."

Although he used to avoid wearing protective gear, he said he tired quickly of the endless wounds and Band-Aids resulting from road rash.

"When I crashed, it shredded my handlebar grips when they hit the pavement. It shredded my gloves too, and my kneepads. I had to get new ones."

The rider who collided with him didn't get a penalty, because riders are expected to keep alert and in the moment, he said.

Even despite his misfortune, Vandenhoven still beat the two riders who ran him over.

"Tanner seems to find an 'extra gear' when disaster strikes," said Mom Wendy Vandenhoven.

After the points from all three qualifiers were tallied, Vandenhoven was one of the first riders to qualify for the main event.

Right off the start of the main race, Vandenhoven said his bike hit the gate, which delayed him exponentially. But somehow, he came back from behind to take gold, he said.

"When he scooped Wood in the third corner, we were all ecstatic knowing that he had a great shot at finishing first," said Wendy.

"It was a great battle and a great effort, all while overcoming the adversity of the day. He raced hard and smart which is what makes me so proud."

While he can now compete internationally, Vandenhoven said the competition would be intense, and would likely require similarly intense training to prepare for.

Vandenhoven plans to move to the Junior category next year, which includes guys from the ages of 16 to 18, and the opportunity to win prize money, he explained.

"It gives you more competition. I hope to go far in this, because I've been doing pretty good lately," said Vandenhoven. "But we'll just have to see."

With Vandenhoven's nine years of BMX experience, he said determination has played a huge factor in getting to where he is today.

"Practise, and you'll get good at it," he advises younger BMX riders. "Keep at it, and have confidence in yourself. That's one of the biggest things."

Letter to the Editor Layton one of Canada's greatest Canadians

Many political strategists will judge Jack Layton's achievements by the number of seats he won for his party over the years, but behind those electoral victories was a leader who remained steadfastly committed to his principles above all.

I met Jack Layton shortly after his arrival in Ottawa as leader of the NDP and watched him in the years that followed as he became a good friend of the peace movement.

He spoke up for diplomatic efforts and dialogue with insurgents to end the war in Afghanistan, years before it became a fashionable position. At the time, he was derided by his critics, taunted and called names by Conservative Party members, and even had his patriotism questioned.

But today, Layton's vision is shared widely in capitals around the world as the only workable solution in that strife-torn region.

There are many other stories like this where Jack endured shameful attacks from his political opponents while he stood by his principles.

I am certain that Jack Layton will be remembered as second only to Tommy Douglas himself: one of Canada's greatest Canadians.

Artful contrarism lost in scribbling nastiness

JOHNNIE BACHUSKY

When hotshot salesman Ricky Roma first encounters his mark James Lingk in the classic 1992 movie Glengarry Glen Ross he smoothly plays his hand as a consummate professional daring to take risks.

"I subscribe to the law of contrary public opinion. If everyone thinks one thing, then I say bet the other way," says Roma, played brilliantly by cinema legend Al Pacino.

For Ricky Roma the art of contrarism is setting up a man for a score while creating the illusion he is just a swell personable guy. It's just business. In fact Lingk clearly likes the smooth-talking shark, even when he finds out later he's been duped.

Well played contrarism is not only a valid tactic for professionals to use to get what you desire and need but when played right they will have room for a classy exit that leaves plenty of smiles and respect.

Too bad there are shocking examples of contrarism that lack the clever and enviable sophistication and class exhibited by Ricky Roma.

Sadly, this is the cynical and nasty side, and it too often comes from the grand old and once honourable profession of journalism, especially when it comes to the passing of national icons.

Last week National Post columnist Christie Blatchford engaged in the ugly side of contrarism with her take on the death of NDP leader Jack Layton. While most Canadians were genuinely moved by the opposition leader's passing, Blatchford saw fit to offer readers a cruel cynical turn on the mass outpouring of affection and grieving for the late NDP leader.

In it, she takes a side-swipe at the CBC's Evan Solomon for riding on the wave of mass grieving. For some journalists, contrarism even means swallowing your own, like a pack of ravenous piranhas.

But she reserves her best shots for the farewell letter Layton left the nation, suggesting it doesn't really pass a fully honourable righteous test because a few others may have had a hand in it.

My guess is that Blatchford wants readers to believe that even on deathbeds public figures must, in order to properly pass the test for scribbling contrarians, somehow do these things themselves, and damn the pain and the grim reaper knocking on the door.

"Rather, it's remarkable because it shows what a canny, relentless, thoroughly ambitious fellow Mr. Layton was. Even on Saturday, two days before he died, he managed to keep a gimlet eye on all the campaigns to come," wrote Blatchford.

"The letter is vainglorious too. Who thinks to leave a 1,000-word missive meant for public consumption and released by his family and the party mid-day, happily just as Mr. Solomon and his fellows were in danger of running out of pap? Who seriously writes of himself, 'All my life I have worked to make things better?'"

It makes one wonder if Blatchford seriously thought Layton's motive was to leap into the future, past his demise, and read the headlines with a big smile on his face and somehow gauge the public response from the pearly gates.

If so, then poor old Jack must have been in far worse mental shape than anyone could have ever imagined.

But hold on. There is more. It comes across the newsroom of the National Post. Blatchford gets a cheerleading boost from colleague Jonathan Kay who presents his followup piece under the ultimate backslapping "look how great we journalists are" headline, "Who has the guts to call out Layton's cynical manifesto? Blatchford, of course."

To buttress his point Kay resurrects a vitriol-fuelled column written by former colleague Peter Scowen in 2000 during the country's mourning over the death of former Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau.

In it, Scowen makes sport of Trudeau's son Justin for what he perceived to be an over-the-top embarrassing eulogy. He did this of course while the rest of the country was either genuinely moved or just quietly wincing and leaving these things alone.

But contrarians being contrarians have this knack in attempting to be so different, so out there in a special place reserved just for them and all their self-righteous musings, that decency, respect and the ability to just shut up will elude them all the way to the gates of their very own maker.

OK, they are columnists. It is their job to offer readers their own different and unique perspectives.

But where and when does one draw the line? Methinks it's quite simple.

They can just clamp the old pie hole when all the lovey-dovey stuff in the public becomes a tad too much.

They may not like the attention this guy or gal gets, and all the goo-goo ga-ga gushing that seemingly flows out of control, but do they really need to spew venom on situations that otherwise demand a greater, kinder reflection? Quiet respectful courtesy is the better order of the day, at least until the prevailing public mood has run its course.

But if that is too daunting then scribbling contrarians can opt for isolation, in the crashing quiet loneliness of their own self-made despair.

It may not be as fun as a bout of scribbling contrarism for public consumption but they may at last get to know the old adage, "When you have nothing nice to say don't say anything at all."

Building Didsbury's History

Bungalows a turn-of-the-century phenomenon

LAURA TANNER

The bungalow in the western world is a turn-of-the-century phenomenon. The word comes from the Hindi word 'bangla' which means 'Bengali style house'. The style found its way to North America via England.

In England before the First World War, the building process was changing. Did you know that 90 per cent of dwellings there were rented rather than owned at this time?

The middle class was growing, housing co-operatives popped up, freehold and leasehold tenures were becoming more acceptable, as were mortgages.

The trend in the new phenomenon of suburbs was for wider lots (rather than the city's terrace housing), so single-family homes could have a larger footprint.

The bungalow is actually more expensive per square foot than a two storey or row house because of the smaller ratio of living space to foundation, but the style flourished in the English suburbs nonetheless.

Popular house styles moved from the very elaborate Victorian to more efficient and simpler Edwardian designs. Health and sanitation were major concerns, so plenty of natural light was provided through larger windows. The kitchen, as well as bathroom, were planned more carefully and efficiently, with an eye to cleanliness.

In Alberta, a turn-of-the-century bungalow would be a low house with a broad front porch and low slope roof, with no upper floor or second floor rooms built within the roof, as in a storey and a half.

The style most known in southern Alberta from this time is the Craftsman or Arts and Crafts house. The Arts and Crafts movement was a step away from mass production and towards the craft of the individual artist.

The style is characterized in part by the stone foundations and fireplaces placed on the exterior of one side.

The large front porch is an extension of the roof, with large overhangs revealing exposed rafters or decorative brackets and supported by large columns.

The green clapboard home at 2113 20 Ave. with the stone foundation is a fine example of the Arts and Crafts style.

Started by Walter Durrer in 1918, he was possibly still building in 1921 as suggested by a bit of newspaper later found in the walls.

Mr. Durrer put a lot of work into this house, planning and finishing each piece of wood by hand and building the stone fences. It was sold in 1929 and the Durrers moved to the 'White House' on 19

Avenue.

The Edwardian era, as with the Victorian, fostered several different styles. An example of a less radical Edwardian style is the Leisner House.

On the corner of 23 Avenue and 21 Street, this beautifully restored home was built by George and Martha Leisner in 1910 for a growing family, including Evelyn Liesner who gave piano lessons here.

The Liesners sold the house and moved to Calgary in 1938 and in 1964 it was one of the first lodges for the elderly in Alberta.

Several additions were made including the north-west wing, the outdoor stairs and the extension of the east side porch.

Bungalows were often also called cottages. What I think of as a cottage is the white clapboard bungalow on the corner of 23 Avenue and 20 Street.

The owner of this house was G.B. Sexsmith, a Massey-Harris dealer who became Didsbury's first mayor in 1904.

From the late 1940s to the 1960s the bungalow form was further simplified to a straight rectangle with a low slope roof, stucco or wood siding exteriors.

Fun Run raises $3,250 for Didsbury long-term care

BY JARED SIEMENS
Review Staff

A whopping $3,250 was raised by participants of Patient and Family Centred Care's first-annual Fun Walk/Run, which was held in tandem with the Didsbury Fair and Rodeo on the morning of Sunday, Aug 21.

Comprised of hospital employees, Patient and Family Centred Care is a committee made up of Didsbury Hospital employees which aims to improve the environment and morale for the residents of long-term care in the hospital.

"I'm not sure how much of that came from registration, but quite a bit of that was donations," said Amanda Gosselin, a committee member. "Overall the run was very successful - we had great weather."

"One of our participants, Kim Harnack, raised $675 on her own to donate," said Gosselin, noting that the hospital is very grateful for her diligent fundraising.

The funds raised during the fun run will go towards purchasing new bedroom furniture for the residents of long-term care, whose dressers and dining tables, among other things, are due for an update, said Gosselin.

"Some of these kinds of things have been overlooked for quite a while, so we're just wanting to upgrade a little bit."

"It's a long run, and we've taken a few steps towards our goal," said Patty Heath, a committee member and the hospital's recreation therapist.

Forty-seven runners clocked a total of 385 kilometres (17 running five kilometres and 30 running the 10).

Top runners Andie Hadway and Mark Leggette had stunning final times, with Hadway finishing her five-kilometre run in just over 27 minutes, while Leggette crossed the 10-kilometre finish line in just 45 minutes and 28 seconds.

The top three runners in each of the five-kilometre and 10-kilometre runs are as follows:

10 km: Mark Leggette

(first), Tom Hadaway (second) and Katie Schiekle (third).

5 km: Andie Hadway (first), Dana Hadway (second) Christine Michaelis (third).

Jared Siemens/Didsbury Review

Dana Hadway leads a group of participants in the five and 10 km Fun Walk/Run, which was held by Patient and Family Centred Care (a hospital employee committee) in tandem with the Didsbury Fair and Rodeo last Sunday morning. 47 participants raised a total of $3,250, which will be put toward the replacement of the long-term care unit's aging furniture.

Football season has arrived

Dragons prepare to set the tone for 2011 season

BY JARED SIEMENS
Review Staff

The Didsbury Dragons are practising hard in preparation for the upcoming football season, as August 31 marks the first game of their 2011 season, against Carstairs Tigers in Carstairs.

As the team enters its fifth year of existence, it will be attempting to reclaim its status as league champion, a title it earned in both 2007 and 2008, said head coach Mark Lefebvre.

Every year the team trains a little bit harder than the previous year, he said, but coaches are attempting to ease the athletes into it, so they aren't too intimidated by the amount of physical fitness football requires. "Each year we've increased it, and we'll do it again this year."

Lefebvre said the team would likely be focusing on a running game this season.

"We've got three running backs returning, and a new quarterback," said Lefebvre. "We lost a real good receiver from last year, so we'll be relying more on our running game."

Lefebvre said while some of the team's returning members are embracing the changes, as it means more field time for some of them, others will have to earn their places anew. "Fresh blood is always good. There are rookies coming onto the team this year who are good athletes and probably will deserve some starting time."

Veterans don't have a reserved spot on the field just because they played last year, said Lefebvre, but they will have to prove their skills and dedication by keeping up with the rookies.

FOOTBALL

"They like that it makes their team stronger, but they don't like that it may take away from their own playing time."

Despite key positions graduating last year, Lefebvre said the team is undaunted, and will adapt with the changes.

"We have a good core of veterans returning, so I suspect we'll be able to hold our own and make it to the championship again."

The team is designed so that those who work the hardest and invest the most time in their playing skills will reap the benefits of field time, Coach said. "They have to earn their playing time. They don't get to play just 'cause they showed up."

This creates an atmosphere of friendly competition within the team to show Lefebvre and Doug Wilson (assistant), Chester Block (assistant), and team manager Duke Moreau that they are worthy of receiving the coveted game time play.

"Because we span from Grade 9 to Grade 12, it actually creates a unique camaraderie across the high school level," said Lefebvre.

"It's an interesting dynamic. You tend to grow strong bonds when you've gone to war together and bled together that goes beyond just playing a sport. Beyond their ages."

The majority of the Dragons don't care as much about winning and losing as they do about getting playing time, said Lefebvre.

The Dragons will attempt to set the tone against rivals and last season's champions Hanna Eagles on Saturday, Sept. 3, the team's first home game of the season, which will be played on the brand new Didsbury High School Football Field.

"We're pretty excited to be playing on that - we've been waiting five years to be playing on the Didsbury football field."

Currently, the field's finishing touches are being taken care of in preparation for its inaugural football season. The practices, which have been taking place east of Ross Ford Elementary School at the vacant lot, will soon be held at the new football field as well.

Students who haven't had a chance to join the team yet need not worry, said Lefebvre, as registration doesn't cut off until mid-September.

Gr. 8s get practice time with Dragons

BY JARED SIEMENS
Review Staff

This season, the Didsbury Dragons football team has initiated a "Redshirt" program, which allows Grade 8 students to get the feel for football by spending quality time with the team.

Although they can't join the team because of age restrictions requiring them to be in Gr. 9-12, Grade 8s can benefit from attending team practices and spending time on the bench during games, said coach Mark Lefebvre.

"You get the feel of it, you get the practice, and you learn how to play football. And then next year you start with vengeance - because you already have a leg up on everybody else."

With the Redshirt program, Lefebvre hopes to get more boys involved in football, all while utilizing their interest to flesh out practices.

"We only have probably about 20-25 players registered, and on any given night, we may only have 15 out for a practice."

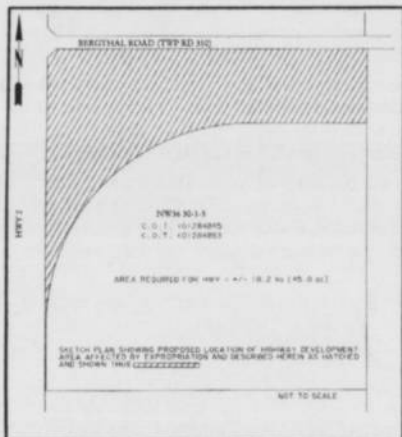

"It makes it very hard to practise with such a small number."

Lefebvre said the cost is reasonable - approximately $25 for the whole season - which covers insurance.

Loan

"The problem is that if we don't do these things now what will it cost us later?" said Wittal.

He said the old public works building was no longer adequate for the fire department. The building has mould and its usable lifespan was projected to end in three to five years.

"It is a safety and health issue for our volunteers," he said, adding a new fire truck that is coming next year will not be able to fit into the old quarters.

Meanwhile, Wittal said tenders would be put out this fall to begin ground work at Shantz Crossing.

He said there has been significant interest with many industrial and commercial companies about moving into the property.

"We've been talking to a number of businesses," he said. "We've been talking to businesses about relocating. Some wanted five acres, other wanted 10."

He said advertising for business opportunities at Shantz Crossing began this month.

Welcome back to school!

Welcome back everyone to what promises to be another exciting school year. I especially welcome our new students and families to our learning communities. I know that you will quickly appreciate all the good things in your school.

This year's Division theme is "With determination, let us run the race ahead!" God calls us to a race with many rewards and challenges along the way. Strong or weak, slow or fast, we all have talents that brings honour and glory to God.

I wish you a very successful school year. May you and your family be abundantly blessed!

Paul Mason
Superintendent of Schools

Success

When all is said and done a person's success will not be measured by what they achieved at the office but rather by what they accomplished at home. Strong families make strong communities. Spend time with your family.

Aarsby, Daryl Clifford (Tex)

Daryl Clifford (Tex) Aarsby was born on April 25, 1957 to Clarence and Norma Aarsby. He was raised on the family farm west of Carstairs and remained there for most of his life. He is survived by his loving wife of 34 years, Lorraine, who has been his guardian angel for the last two years of his life while he struggled with a rare lung disease. She was his everything 24/7, best friend and caregiver. He has also left behind his two children, Cody and Stacey (Joe) and his precious grandchildren John and Carley. While he struggled to breathe you only had to mention them and his eyes would light up and he would tell you some cute things they had done. He is also survived by his dad, Clarence whose pain is unbearable having lost a second son, his sister Gwen (Brian), sister-in-law Dolores (Terry) Hehr and Lorraine's family whom Daryl was very close to, mother-in-law Barb McClean, sister-in-law Marlene (Guy) Gjos, and brother-in-law Gord (Laurie) Botham. He is also survived by nieces, nephews, aunts, uncles, cousins and friends. Daryl was predeceased by his mother, Norma in 1985, his brother Rick in 1989, father-in-law Elmer in 2007 and his grandparents. In lieu of flowers donations can be made to the Rosebud Health Foundation, Box 962, Didsbury, Alberta T0M 0N0. Messages of condolence may be left for the family at www.myalternatives.ca.
